WALL STREET LOSSES GROW ON EARLY SALES

DOWNWARD PLUNGE BEGINS TEN MINUTES AFTER MARKET OPENS.

By Boston American Special Writer.
NEW YORK, March 14.—The stock market opened irregular with a number of active securities showing moderate fluctuations, but at the end of ten minutes the downward movement had started and prices began to drop with a rapidity that was not anticipated. The opening was a surprise to many observers, who had expected a more steady start. The market was characterized by a general decline in prices, with many stocks showing significant losses. The downward movement was particularly pronounced in the early hours of the trading session, as investors reacted to the initial sales. The market's volatility was a stark contrast to the previous day's performance, and it raised concerns among traders and investors alike. The early start of the decline was a key factor in the overall negative sentiment that prevailed throughout the day.

Delmas Wins Decision in Bitter Fight Over Girl's Alleged Affidavit and Lawyer Is Refused Permission to Testify as to Its Contents—Great Victory for Thaw Defence

By Boston American Special Writer.
NEW YORK, March 14.—The main prop upon which District Attorney Jerome relied to force Harry K. Thaw into the electric chair for the killing of Stanford White was today knocked from under him when Justice Fitzgerald, following an eloquent argument by Lawyer Delmas, refused to allow Lawyer "Ab" Hummel to tell of the famous affidavit that, it is alleged, Evelyn Thaw made in his office.

This affidavit which the little disbarred attorney was called to get into the case was the gravest menace that has threatened the rich young lawyer. Its interception was probably the greatest victory achieved for the defence since the trial began.

POINTS FINGER AT HUMMEL.
Hummel took the stand as soon as court opened. Thaw walked in to the trial room smiling. Delmas began his argument at once for the exclusion of Hummel's evidence. When he referred to the former noted divorce lawyer he pointed his finger at him and called him "this man." Hummel shrunk back in his chair until his feet did not reach the floor.

LONG HYPOTHETICAL QUERY.
Jerome's hypothetical question had been phrased, and the prosecutor had a copy of it in his hand when he entered the courtroom. Among the state's experts in the law of evidence, it was believed to be the longest ever propounded in court. It took him some twenty minutes to utter it. It was a long, winding, and complex query that sought to establish the credibility of Hummel's testimony. The judge listened intently, and the courtroom was silent as the words were spoken. The query was a masterpiece of legal craftsmanship, designed to catch the defendant off guard and to expose any inconsistencies in his story.

ANGRY CLASH OF COUNSEL.
It was finally decided that Hummel could be asked about certain parts of his story. Delmas agreed to this, and it was believed that he had won a tactical victory. However, the clash of counsel was far from over. The two sides engaged in a heated argument over the scope of the questions that could be asked. The judge had to intervene several times to maintain order and to ensure that the proceedings followed the rules of evidence. The atmosphere in the courtroom was tense, and the spectators were captivated by the dramatic exchange between the two lawyers. The case had become a spectacle, and the outcome was expected to have significant implications for the trial.

FLOOD MENACE IN PITTSBURG, HUNDREDS FLEE

Rivers Threatened to Reach Highest Stage Known and Cause Disaster.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 14.—With the water in the rivers here at thirty-two feet, ten feet over the flood stage mark, and rising right before an hour, the lower sections of a Pittsburgh and Allegheny and surrounding towns are inundated, and are in great danger. The flood is one of the worst since 1884, when the highest official record ever taken here was 32 feet 6 inches. At the rate the water is now rising this stage will soon be passed. The danger to Pittsburgh and vicinity is greatly increased by heavy ice jams in the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers about twenty-five miles above the city. One ice jam alone in the latter river at Parker is thirty miles in length. The danger to the city is now rising this stage will soon be passed. GIRL SUICIDE BEGS MASS FOR SOUL'S REPOSE

Pathetic Request in Tear-Stained Note Found by Her Body.

Dear Sister—I hope that you won't feel sorry over my death as I am in great trouble. I have decided to commit suicide. I have written a mass said for me. I wish that I could see you and mamma. Note left by Kathleen Fitzgerald, found beside her body.

RHODE ISLAND LID WILL BE ON BETTING

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, March 14.—It is generally understood by the betting business here that there will be no opportunity of backing the new Governor, Governor Hughes, in the Rhode Island Circuit court at Narragansett Park the coming season, as Rhode Island will have the same as the one last year.

With the retirement of Governor T. W. from office there was expressed the sentiment that the new Governor, Governor Hughes, might have different views on the subject of betting at the race track.

This morning it was announced that Governor Hughes had been asked to permit betting at Narragansett Park the coming season, as Rhode Island will have the same as the one last year.

It is a well known fact that Governor Hughes has been asked to permit betting at Narragansett Park the coming season, as Rhode Island will have the same as the one last year.

FOUR OF BOSTON AMERICAN BASEBALL SQUAD AT LITTLE ROCK, AR.

Here are presented pictures of four members of the Boston American baseball squad, taken expressly for Hearst's BOSTON AMERICAN at the training camp at Little Rock, Ark. The men are in tip top form, and doing all kinds of diamond stunts at present. Jesse Tannehill bids fair to be in just as good pitching form this season as ever. Moe Ferris is burning the grass around second base with hot stunts, stopping hard ground balls. Bill Carrigan is in better condition than last season, and it looks as though the former Holy Cross catcher will be a great help to the Pilgrims behind the bat. McGraw is the local boy with the squad, and he certainly looks good so far.

REPORTERS

Weather Has Been Bad Ever Since Squad's Arrival at West Baden, Ind.

DOLAN MAY BE SENT TO HOSPITAL IN LOUISVILLE

WEST BADEN, Ind., March 14.—If present conditions are any indication, the team will have no opportunity to practice here during the remainder of the team stay. It has been raining almost incessantly since the team arrived, with the result that the grounds on which the practice grounds are located with water two inches deep in places. Even if the weather turned clear today, the "Doves" will be unable to have a workout, as it will be impossible for the grounds to dry up for some time.

The players are chafing under the restriction from playing. The new arrivals are anxious to get into the game, but the inability of the old Jupiter Springs to understand the "kidder" language has been responsible for the lack of squad workouts.

However, the new arrivals have plenty of opportunity in their idleness to develop the play of the old squad, which was the chief reason for the management's sending them here. It is the first opportunity since the team arrived, with the result that the grounds on which the practice grounds are located with water two inches deep in places. Even if the weather turned clear today, the "Doves" will be unable to have a workout, as it will be impossible for the grounds to dry up for some time.

Treat Policemen
Like Human Beings

They Are Certainly Entitled to an Occasional Day Off and a Chance to Get Acquainted with Their Families

Few people in Boston realize that the public servants who guard their houses from burglaries and fires, who protect them from street accidents and from thugs, who are at the front whenever danger threatens to any citizen—are never allowed to take a day off nor leave the city limits except during a paltry two weeks in midsummer.

How persons are aware of the extraordinary hours to which the police of Boston are subjected.

Study the following table showing the hours of duty of the men in the police department who are known as night men.

First day. Report for duty at 5:45 p. m. Remain on patrol duty to 1:15 a. m.

Second day. Report for duty at 5:45 p. m. On duty on the floor of the station house until 9 p. m. Allowed to retire until 12:45, but forced to remain in the station house and to be on call in case of emergency. Patrol duty from 12:45 a. m. to 8:15 a. m.

Third day. Report for duty at 5:45 p. m. On patrol until 1:15 a. m.

Fourth day. Report for duty at 8 a. m. (less than seven hours after having finished the previous day's work). House duty from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. Allowed to leave station house from 6 to 10 p. m. Must report for duty at 10 and go on patrol at 1 a. m., remaining on patrol until 8:15 a. m.

Fifth day. Report at 5:45 p. m. On patrol until 1:15 a. m. Station house duty from then until 8 a. m.

Sixth day. Report at 5:45 p. m., unless expressly excused. Station house duty until 12:45. Patrol duty from 12:45 to 8:15 a. m.

At the end of this sixth day the "night" policeman begins the schedule all over again without a single day's rest or without any adequate opportunity to see his family. He is lucky if he gets off with having to devote no more time to his duties than this schedule calls for.

If he has made any arrests he must appear in court to prosecute the prisoners, and usually this has to be done in the only period that is allotted to him for sleep.

If a three-alarm fire occurs he must get up from his bed or leave his table and rush to the station house for duty.

If there is a riot or a strike he may have to remain on duty twenty-four hours a day.

If voters are to be listed he must REPORT AT 7 A. M., WORK ALL DAY, AND THEN PERFORM THE TOUR OF NIGHT DUTY OUTLINED ABOVE.

The more fortunate day policeman must report at the station house at 7:45 a. m. and remain on patrol duty until 6:15 p. m. If there is a big football game, or a caucus, or an election, or something unusual in the city's life taking place, he will be impressed for evening duty as well as day duty.

He gets no day off. While other people are going to the beaches for holidays in the summer, or enjoying themselves in the various ways which take them out of the city's limits, the policeman is practically a prisoner condemned to remain at call inside the city's limits for 361 days in succession every year, without a let-up.

If he happens to be father of a small boy or girl he cannot even take that child to Revere beach in the summer time during one of the brief intervals which he gets from duty either at the station house or on patrol.

Every day FOR 361 DAYS IN SUCCESSION he must report at a given hour and remain on duty not less than 7½ hours, and once at least in every six days he is on duty practically twenty hours at a stretch.

What chance has a man in such circumstances to perform his duty AS A FATHER TO HIS CHILDREN?

A bill now pending before the Legislature will give every policeman one day in seven. It should be passed. IT IS IN CONFORMITY WITH THE TENETS OF EVERY RELIGION AND EVERY SECT, Jew or Christian.

Every man ought to have one day off in the week, and every policeman is certainly entitled to one day in seven in which to become acquainted with his family and to perform those filial and paternal duties which make him not only a better man but a better POLICEMAN and a better citizen.

They Shot the Man
That Destroyed
and Deserted
His Sister

And They Shooked Villard of the Evening Post—Naturally

In the South a man shamefully betrayed a young girl, and her brothers—known to newspaper readers as "the Strother brothers, of Culpeper, Virginia"—compelled the man to marry their sister.

The nature of a cowardly dog impelled the man to abandon the girl after he had married her. He married her to save his skin. Then he planned to run away and leave her to disgrace.

The "Strother brothers," however, made different arrangements, and the man who injured their sister has ended his crimes and also his running away.

A Southern jury acquitted the Strother brothers, declaring that they were under provocation that might make cool reflection difficult. The Southern judge remarked to the jury that, on the whole, he was rather glad that they were free, and that the gentleman in the graveyard would not disturb any other man's sister.

Shootings, lynchings, all violence, are regrettable—EXTREMELY SO. It would have been more satisfactory if the Strother brothers could have received adequate satisfaction from a jury WITHOUT wasting good powder and shot on a poor specimen.

But we cannot accept the views circulated by Mr. Villard of the New York Evening Post. In New York, of course, those views are not weighty. But in the South they might be looked upon as representing Northern opinion.

Mr. Villard says, in his Evening Post editorial, that the Southern judge and jury disgraced themselves. He calls the act of the Strother brothers "inexcusable murder." He can see no good reason why a brother should resent such treatment of a sister, and he adds, "So long as the Southern press sympathizes with lawbreakers and lawless spirit is that of a lyncher, it is idle to expect that there will be genuine respect for law."

We ask Southern editors and judges, BEFORE they take Villard as an expression of Northern opinion, to look up the case of "Villard's sister against Villard." They will readily see that Mr. Villard, sued by his own sister and accused of taking from her money left to her by her father, is not exactly the man to interpret the average man's feelings toward a sister.

We know nothing of the Villard case—except the charges that the sister made and the defence which Villard's friends offer for him—a pretty sickly defence.

But we do know that Southern editors, judges and juries have no right to take Villard as expressing Northern opinion where SISTERS are concerned. On other matters, such as the propriety of changing your real name for another, etc., he may be an authority.

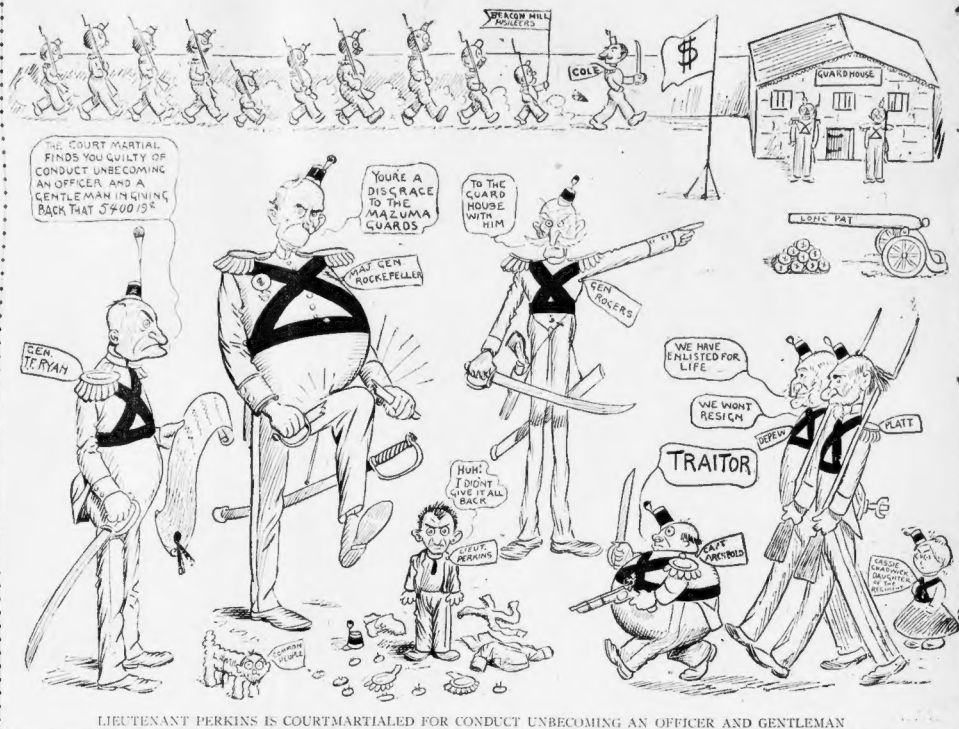

But he is prejudiced when he makes himself the heroic, DISTANT defender of the man that made a mistake when he treated the sister of the Strother brothers lightly.

We deplore violence, as aforesaid. But, on the whole, we congratulate the South upon the fact that its view of a man's proper attitude toward a sister differs from that of the Evening Post.

Two Types of the Christian Soldier

By Charles Fleischer
(RABBI TEMPLE ADATH ISRAEL)

GENERAL WILLIAM BOOTH seriously. The career of Dowie reads like and "Apostle" John Alexander a chapter in Professor James's book on "Varieties of Religious Experience." The contrast is presented by these two "Christian soldiers."

General Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, militant campaigner for righteousness, and "Apostle" Dowie, picture-come-true of the man of Elisha, have a religious system which will save America like a tidal wave.

Alexander Dowie lies dead in the Zion City which he created, at less than sixty, a defeated, disappointed man, despondent and rejected of men, forsaken and reviled by even those who at one time fairly worshipped him.

Dowie is dead, and Dowie is dead! It is! Look on "Elijah" Dowie and then on General Booth.

Look here upon this picture and on "Elijah" Dowie and his ilk I have said enough—too much. Of William Booth's shall not attempt to speak now, for I could not say enough.

If you have a man who claims nothing for himself, everything for suffering humanity. Here is a preacher who does not pry of heaven, but demands justice and righteousness here on earth. He breaks no precept of the law of the ideal.

In General Booth you have a spiritual soldier who lives by the high motto of the apostle Paul: "If I am not for myself, who will be? But if I am only for myself, what can I do? And if not now, when?"

Let your eyes be turned to General William Booth, intrepidly spiritual veteran, whom the gods have loved because he lights the way for the despised, whom God keeps strong because he espouses the cause of the weak!

Where lives the man that has not tried how mirth can into folly glide, and folly into sin. SCOTT.
